BARRETT'S
Felt and Composition Roofs,
Which, on account of their extraordinary Fire resisting qualities, have been appropriately denominated the Salamander Roof.
THIS KIND OF ROOFING WAS INTRODUCED into Chicago seven years ago, and at that age, by its Works, Warren, whose name is that sec-ond to none in the City for Honesty and Integrity in all its dealings, and is advised, if practicable, even to its appearance, that the Roofs put on by him are of the very best kind of Roof, by all those who have inquired into the merits of the different kinds of Roofing that have been introduced under every variety of circumstances, and in a greater degree than any other the important advantage of Safety against Fire and Weather.
The introduction into Chicago seven years ago, and ever since the introduction it has given here, that character for Durability and Safety which it has given to the Roofs of the old countries, and which it has given to the Roofs of the Eastern cities, and which it has given to the Roofs of the Southern cities. Among the many hundreds of Roofs covered by us with the Felt and Composition, are those of the Tremont House, Sherman House, Briggs House, Rush, Russell, Tremont, Revere, Lake House, Richmond House, Matteson House, Metropolitan Block, and more than half of the largest blocks of business houses on Lake, South Water, Wells, Franklin, Dearborn, Clark, Randolph, Washington, and other streets, and in numerous sections, including some of the finest dwellings in the City. Numbers of Widows and Orphans have these Roofs on their dwellings, and the Roof has given all others in the vicinity of their Roofs a character for safety, which has often saved her drying purposes, and have been valued at ten times the cost of the Roof, on the occasion of the last fire.
Those who are in search to know that there is a great variety of Composition Roofs, many of them very similar in their appearance, but very different in their durability, safety and cost, and consequently very different in point of economy, will find it to their interest to examine the quality of our Felt, as well as in the quantity used, and the manner of doing the entire work; consequently, while we are not responsible for a different kind of Roofing than our specifications, have everywhere given the preference to our own, and have in no instance, where the Roof has been examined by the same as ours, been preferred to it by the same as ours, have performed the work in the best manner, and have used the best material.
Orders left at the Office, on the Corner of Lake and Wells streets, will receive prompt attention.

Mr. Douglas' Printed Speech.

The St. Louis Republican having demanded the publication of Mr. Douglas' speech, the report is brought to-day in better shape for the public. It is generally well understood that this long-winded effort was employed by the orator in expounding the real issues involved in the Presidential campaign, and the most unobtainable manner—and in adding to the confusion as to what is the real issue, with the very considerable Douglas' Position.

Between the lecture of Jackson, Yulobusha, and the speech of Douglas, Mississippi, the people may know many shades of opinion on the Kansas question. That Douglas is not in favor of the Lecompton Constitution, and that he is opposed to the admission of Kansas under it, is clear enough. But that he is opposed to the admission of Kansas under any circumstances, is not so clear. He says that he is opposed to the admission of Kansas under any circumstances, unless the people desire it. But he says that he is in favor of the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, if the people desire it. He says that he is opposed to the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, because the people do not

TERRIBLE STORMS.

Immense Loss of Property—Comet Supposed to have Struck.

(From the Oswego Times, June 24.)

During the prodigious storm of rain which deluged the earth on Saturday afternoon, one of the most remarkable and destructive whirlwinds we have ever heard of visited the section of country lying to the south-west of this city, in the town of Oswego. From actual observations made yesterday upon the spot, together with such information as we obtained from the most reliable authority, we give a brief statement of the affair.

The tornado commenced at a point five miles south-west of the city, near the residence of Mr. Peter Simmons. During the storm two large clouds were observed rushing together with immense force; the noise of their collision resembled the report of a cannon, and was heard at a considerable distance. The wind seems to have leaped from the clouds, and descended towards the earth; the entire roof of a barn belonging to Mr. Simmons was taken off, and the fragments, boards, shingles and pieces of rafters, strewed along for the distance of a mile and a quarter.

The whirlwind passed on and next struck the dwelling-house of Mr. James Cole, tore out the gable end and took up the building, scattering and turning it half round on its foundations! Incredible as this appears, it is strictly true, and the front door of the house which formerly opened towards the street, now opens in a lot belonging to the yard. Mr. and Mrs. Cole were absent at the time, leaving two children in the house. It may well be supposed that on their return they were considerably astonished at the appearance of things, though overjoyed to find their children unharmed, except from fright. The wind having spent its fury and malice at this point, departed on its journey to the east-ward.

The orchard of Mr. Oliver Foster was next in its course. This was completely prostrated, some of the trees taken up and tossed hither and thither at the sport of the destroyer, and the tops of the trees sent flying through the air at a great distance.

The whirlwind having thus executed its purpose in destroying property, next made an attempt upon life, with but too fearful success. A German teamster, named Martin Schwader, in the employ of Mr. Furniss, who owns a saw mill in that region, was loading staves in a wagon. Old Mr. Furniss was handing him the staves, while the teamster took them and stowed them away in the wagon. The attention of the two men was attracted by a singular noise, when, looking upward, they saw a large, heavy barn-shovel flying through the air over their heads, at about forty feet from the ground, and twirling around in the most singular manner.

Naturally enough their eyes were rivetted upon this remarkable phenomenon, and the next instant a small maple tree, standing nearly its length from the wagon, was caught by the wind, and the top of it thrown directly across the wagon, knocking the teamster down upon the staves, and throwing Mr. Furniss upon the ground. The latter was but slightly injured, and he soon rendered such help was at hand. The top of the tree was cut away, and the unfortunate German found lying on the staves which were covered by his blood from his mouth and head. He was taken up insensible, and medical aid procured for him as soon as possible. At the last accounts he was still insensible, and it is thought he cannot survive.

After this bloody exploit, the tornado sped on to a wood-lot of about ten acres, owned by Gilbert & Penfield. Throughout the whole ten acres there is not a tree standing, while their tops are broken off and carried through the air to an incredible distance. Mr. Gilbert describing the devastation, said every kind of timber was lying flying through the air, rushed into the wood, and he could hear it plainly as it took their course, and as fast as possible, "for the comet had struck, and their time upon earth was short!" He frequently absolutely astonished to find himself on this sublunary sphere to-day, after having fully made up his mind to leave it for—he knew not where.

Not satisfied yet, the whirlwind next attacked two barns belonging to Mr. Henry Howe, and utterly destroyed both. One of them was taken from the "underpinning" and carried bodily about forty rods, when it fell to the earth a heap of ruins. The other barn was broken to pieces, and strewed about in all directions. Mr. Howe seems to have had the same idea concerning this remarkable phenomenon. Mounting his horse, he rode out in time to overtake Fitch's Corners, and hurriedly inquired of those he met if they did not believe the Comet had struck. Considering the fact of these wonderful occurrences having happened on the 22d of June—the day set by a German astronomer for the destruction of the earth—it is not to be wondered at that a somewhat credulous man should entertain this idea, based as these singular and appalling circumstances.

Beyond the barns of Mr. Rowe, the course of this whirlwind is marked distinctly to the Oswego river, by uprooted trees, huts and barns, through orchards and wood lots, but after getting about one mile east of Mr. Rowe's residence, its principal fury seems to have been spent, and it "leaves disappear entirely on reaching the river.

Such is a brief but truthful account of a whirlwind which we do not believe ever had its equal on the globe for fury and prodigious power, and which stretched over a section of about five miles, marking its course with destruction to everything that came in its way. The loss of property cannot be less than $25,000.

The Comet in Cuetzio Co.—Singular and Dreadful Effects on Men and Animals.

The Utica Herald of Monday gives an account of the appearance in that city and county, on Saturday afternoon, of a peculiar atmospheric body, colored by fire, with its point toward the earth and spreading out until lost in the clouds, apparently a nebulous or vapory body, passing at a slow rate, and without any sound. In its course through Deerfield, it presented fences, and tore up trees, and when it reached Schuyler, it settled lower, and destroyed the barn of Mr. Budlong, in a twinkling. Rev. Mr. Warren, the Baptist minister, saw the object approaching his house, and ran at once home, took up two of his children, and told his wife to follow him with the babe and two other children, into the cellar, for safety. Mr. Warren was saved, but his wife had only reached the cellar door when the ruin came,—the house was lifted from its foundations and dashed into fragments. Mrs. Warren was found in the ground about ten feet from the cellar door, almost entirely stripped of her clothing, and so severely injured about her neck and body that she died within an hour after the calamity, although entirely conscious; her infant was found near by, and almost entirely free from injury, yet utterly destitute of clothing. A little boy who was following his mother to the cellar, is now lying unconscious from the effects of the concussion of the common wreck. His recovery is very doubtful. Another girl escaped without any injury. The dwelling was two stories, 18x26 feet, and substantially built. In the rear of it was a barn, distant about five rods, 25x32 feet, which was literally shivered into splinters.

Several barns were destroyed as the waterspout, or whatever the powerful body was, proceeded, and a cow on the farm of Mr. Dudley was instantly killed, without showing any exterior wound. Two barns belonging to this gentleman were destroyed, and very little of the lumber now could be found any where. A mile beyond this point, the singular body rose into the air, with a rapid whirling motion, and its destructive effects were no more witnessed. A violent wind and rain storm followed, which was confined within a district not over four or five miles in extent, in a due south-easterly direction from where its first touch was felt, and in a track about three rods in width. Wood over or material substance presented itself in this track was swept away, and the ruin presented a fearful to behold.

This moving mass of vapor was charged with electricity, in the opinion of some, and to the shock occasioned, is attributed the death of Mrs. Warren. A young man engaged in making hasty hay in the fields, while the fire was building destroyed, was found some time after in convulsions. The barn appeared to be burnt asunder, as if by an internal explosion. A woman and a girl nearly grown, seeing the cloud approaching, ran to get outside its track, but were lifted off their feet and thrown across the fence, with bruises and torn dresses. An old and very much decayed tree, which was directly in the course of the storm, was uprooted, and the roots presented a singular appearance, as if they had been burnt off by fire. Fences were prostrated, and the fragments of timber were thrown a great distance, and in some instances, broken to pieces.

Those who were in the track of the storm describe it as being accompanied by a peculiar noise, and a sensation of suffocation, which was very distressing, and all experienced the same.
